closed from the weeks immediately preceding. It is a generally recognized fact that business is not entirely satisfactory. There is no speculation and no launching out in new enterprises. Money is plentiful but the demand is light. This is in part due to the fact that lenders are discouraging all chance enterprises and demanding giltedged security on all loans. Conservatism rules the situation more completely than has been the case in several years. Some attribute this to the fact years. Some attribute this to the fact that this is presidential year. Others argue that politics has nothing to do with the matter, but that a general settling up is given by settling up is going on.

What Dun & Co. Say.

George Rust, local manager for R. G. Dun & Co., in speaking of the situation, said yesterday:

"The fall jobbing trade is satisfactory, and the volume of this trade promises to measure fully up to that of last year. Local jobbing houses are now making shipments of goods for the of last year. Local jobbing houses are now making shipments of goods for the fall trade, especially in dry goods and clothing. Groceries are steady, the wholesale trade is quiet and the same is true of shoes. There is absolutely no speculative business, and this has a tendency to depress the market. The sugar beet crop will break all previous records, and of course this will make itself felt in local business. Other crops are also doing well and promising big yields."

Serious Outbreak in Camp Black Hawk.

SOME CIVILIANS INJURED

THE ONLY UNPLEASANT INCI-DENT OF THE ENCAMPMENT.

(Special to The Herald.) Camp Black Hawk, Aug. 27 .- Camp Black Hawk is now a thing of the past. Unfortunately, last night, an past. Unfortunately, last night, an occurrence took place which marred the otherwise pleasant condition which has characterized the encampment and the association of the soldlers and citizens. There are conflicting accounts of the affair, but it appears that liquor was at the bottom of the trouble. It is charged that some of the civilians who had been drinking at the resort saloon were in the dance hall where they made uncomplimentary remarks about the guardsmen, calling them tin soldlers, etc., and that these and similar remarks naturally made the soldiers feel bilious and mad, and at the close of the dance about 12:30 o'clock, as a hack carrying a load of civilians was starting for Provo it was stopped by the guard and the occupants were told they would not be allowed to proceed. The passengers objected, stating that the ladies could not walk home.

It is asserted further, that Major Arthur L. Thomas, jr., made the insulting remark that they were not ladies, for ladies would not be there at that time of night. This angered the occupants of the hack, and challenges were hurled back and forth.

A Bayonet Charge. The crowd about the hack became somewhat dense and riotous, and Lieutenant R. A. Young, officer of the guard, ordered a bayonet charge, driving back the crowd, and inflicting slight wounds on several people. In the crowd were men, women and children, most of whom got out of the road as quickly as possible, but some of the men, however, were inclined to show fight. One guardsman was knocked down by Bern Walton. Bern was quickly surrounded and taken to the guard house. Lieutenant Young was assaulted, and viclously beaten. He succeeded, finally, in drawing his saber, and made several savage swings with it, but no one was within reach.

The Saloon Was Closed.

The Saloon Was Closed. It was decided by the guardsmen to close the saloon and at the same time capture the men who had assaulted Lieutenant Young. At double quick time, with bayonets set, they marched to the saloon. This time none of the crowd was in the way. They had a healthful respect for the bayonet net.

The saloon was closed, and at the The saloon was closed, and at the same time, a couple of men were arrested, but it appears they were not of the party who had assaulted Lleutenant Young. The grounds were cleared of civilians and the incident

The ngers were not ordered out of the hack.

The so-called "charge" was not a charge, but the guards simply marched to the saloon, made the arrest referred to, and closed the saloon.

Still Another Story.

Another story is to the effect that a crowd of regulars, who had been out after taps, rushed the guard and the civilians jeered the guard, whereupon the officer of the guard ordered a bay-

By 12:30 the boys were marching. They reached the cars at the R. G. W. depot, loaded them, and at 3:30 the train for the north pulled out, taking most of the guardsmen with them. Those going south went a little later.
